

Procedures Safeguarding People Under Court Protection

Safeguarding People Under Court Protection

DENVER — (January 15, 2009) The Colorado Judicial Branch has asked former Denver Magistrate Sandie Franklin to help streamline and improve probate procedures to better protect children, senior citizens, people with mental disabilities and others under supervision of the probate courts.

The nation is experiencing an increasing demand on resources for protected persons as the population grows and demographics shift. Denver Probate Court magistrate, she handled thousands of cases involving guardianships and conservatorships for protected persons.

After 16 years on the bench, Franklin joined Legal Resolution Center to offer mediation and arbitration services to clients throughout the Rocky Mountain region. She will continue to offer her services through Legal Resolution Center as her work with the State Court Administrator's Office permits.

Richard Borchers, former judge and founder of Legal Resolution Center, said he is proud to share Franklin's experience in probate law and proceedings with the state. "She is our expert in probate law and a great asset to the legal community," he noted. "We are excited to have Sandie back at work in the State courts, applying her knowledge and experience to improve our legal system."

To learn more about Legal Resolution Center or schedule an appointment, call 1-888-881-7365 or visit online at www.legalresolutioncenter.com.